Stokes D. Later in the season, when some areas of their breeding range have become quite dry, the birds may move up into the foothills or the lower elevations of mountain slopes where the habitats are lush and other flowers have come into bloom.

Sometimes the bird gives off a wing-flapping sound as it briefly pauses at a site. There are actually insects called hummingbird large daybird moths, or sphinx moths time flying moths that people mistake. What have been studied are the temporary territories formed around rich food sources while the birds are on migration. These calls may be heard for up to 3 weeks. Mid-May through the end of June place to go.
