The intellectus fidei takes various forms in the life of the Church and in the community of believers in accordance with the different gifts of the faithful lectio divinameditation, preaching, theology as a science. But the parts that were good, were very good, and the less estimable portions were still edifying.

Human reason, itself part of created reality, does not simply project on to reality in its richness and complexity a framework of intelligibility; it adapts itself to the intrinsic intelligibility of reality. Salvation by progress is an error of 19th-century idealism which was grafted on to Judaism by the theological speculation of the last century.
