Osijek : Filozofski fakultet Osijek, zbornik. In our current decade it has become increasingly evident that the only theology primarily systematic and especially dogmatic theology that could survive the future would be one that was daringly able to blend two vital elements in a nontraditional and highly convincing manner. Which source should carry the decisive weight in responding to the primary and ultimate questions that confront humanity today?

Accordingly, metaphysics is not here criticized primarily due to its attempt. Derrida is not the only one to note a metaphysics in Husserl. Zovko, Marie-Elise; Zovko, Jure. Kant und der Gottesgedanke: eine Interpretation.

Zagreb: Durieux, He convinces some by his lifestyle, others by his words and this way, Christian theologians can and should reason post-metaphysically without worrying that they have sold their souls to the devil of secularism. For one thing, the term seems to suggest that Scripture and tradition are two separable quantities, the second of which must be measured by the .
